Class in Physical Education.

Prof. C. Rucker Adams is meeting with success in the organization of classes in Physical Education. Nearly every gentleman to whom the system has been explained has seen its merits and decided to prove them by joining the classwork. It takes time to interview the numbers of business men who are capable of appreciating the advantages of a systematic, scientific form of exercises which will benefit all the muscular portion of the body. New members to the class are being added each day and Prof. Adams expects to soon have the class in good working order.

If you desire a Spring tonic which will build up and invigorate the whole body, renew the appetite, induce sleep and regulate the system, give this work a fair trial and its results are sure.

The work is equally as beneficial for ladies and children as for men. Especially for the tired, nervous women who live on nervous energy; the woman who feels the lassitude of body and mind common to the season. In fact to all who feel a weakness in any muscle of the body.

Children are taught the development of perfect bodies by correct positions, proper poise, chest development and close attention to the little things which combine to give to the child that perfect body which alone is a fit temple for the indwelling of the soul.

This line of culture is much neglected in the schools of this State and if you desire to give to your child an inheritance which cannot be taken away, give him proper instruction in physical training, that he may be able to enjoy and use the mental culture of his educational life.

Mrs. Adams is at the home of Mrs. Hart on Duncan avenue and will be glad to meet and consult with any ladies feeling the need of uniform exercises for themselves or their children.

The class for men will open this evening at 7:30. All who have signed are requested to be present. Studio at Knights of Pythias Hall, over Tucker's store.

The Real Danger

From heart disease is not the possibility of a sudden death, for they are comparatively few; but following in the wake of this dread disease comes a general breaking down of every organ of the body. Circulation is retarded; digestion is deranged; the blood is contaminated; the nerves weakened and the brain clouded. If your heart is affected begin at once to guard against these dangers. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, has rescued thousands who were given up to die, and it will help you, too, if you try it.

For several years I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, palpitation of the heart, short of breath, smothering spells and pain in chest, back, left side and arm. I was so very bad that I remained in my bed the whole of one summer. Was treated by three physicians, but derived no benefit. Finally I saw a paper advertising Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine. I began their use and was so greatly benefited that I am now doing my own housework and enjoy excellent health."

THE CAR MEN'S STRIKE

Several Disorders in Connection With the Strike in St. Louis.

Cars Run Over the City Lines Under Strong Police Protection—Suburban Cars Run With but Slight Disturbance.

St. Louis, May 11.—The feature of the day in the street railway strike which commenced Tuesday morning in this city by the men on the St. Louis Traction Co.'s lines refusing to work longer unless their demands for higher wages were acceded to, was the conference between Gov. Stephens, the members of the executive committee of the local street railway employees' association and the officers and attorneys of the transit company, for the purpose of ascertaining if some sort of an amicable understanding could not be arrived at. The conference lasted for several hours, but at its conclusion Gov. Stephens said that nothing had been accomplished. The strikers' officials were willing to arbitrate, provided the proposition to do so came from the railway company. The railway officials refused to entertain any such proposal, stating that they had nothing to arbitrate.

St. Louis, May 12.—Affairs in the street railway strike have not materially changed. Rioting was kept up in various parts of the city. In one instance the police fired into a crowd and in others used their clubs on those who attempted to interfere with the running of cars. The suburban system ran all its cars under an escort of police. So close was the watch maintained by the force that practically no disturbance occurred on its lines. The Transit Co. started cars on a number of its branches, and notwithstanding the ample police protection afforded, trouble cropped out in various directions.

St. Louis, May 13.—The California avenue division was reopened Saturday under police protection. Seven cars are running and more will be put on during the day. All clerks in the offices of the Lindell division of the transit company at Vandeventer and Park avenues, were sworn in as policemen Saturday afternoon.

St. Louis, May 14.—The sixth day of the street railway strike was especially quiet and devoid of interest. Not a wheel, except of the mail cars, was turned in the city in consequence of the decision of Chief of Police Campbell to give the men of the force, who had had but little time for rest during the past five days, a chance to recuperate for the coming week.

The management of the two street railway companies, who feared to run cars without police protection, decided to make no attempt to keep their lines open. As a result the turbulent scenes that last week marked the reopening of the different lines were not experienced, and the day passed off without serious trouble. The only police on duty were stationed at the different power houses and car sheds.

STRIKE IN KANSAS CITY.

Cars in Full Operation Owing to an Injunction Issued by the Federal Court.

Kansas City, Mo., May 14.—Every street car line in this city and Kansas City, Kan., was in full operation Sunday, and no show of violence was offered by the strikers. The injunction of the federal court, enjoining the union men from interfering with the running of cars, and the added fact that it was Sunday, combined to have a salutary effect on the strikers.

The railway officials had had applications from twice as many men as they could use, and, to be sure of no delay, placed half a dozen extra crews at the terminus of each line, paying them full wages, to fill the gap that might be caused by any recruits to the strikers' ranks.

Occasionally along the line the cry of "scab" would be heard, but it was principally the act of boys who took delight in tantalizing the men. There was practically nothing to indicate that a strike was in progress. President Holmes declared that so far as his company was concerned the walk-out was a matter of history, and he emphasized this fact by joining a party of friends on a jaunt to Leavenworth. The strikers, interviewed individually, however, declared they were still hopeful and that they soon would show different results.

During the afternoon the industrial council held an enthusiastic meeting and adopted resolutions sympathizing with the street car men and ordering a boycott on the railway company. The resolutions request the presidents of the different unions represented in the council to instruct their members not to ride on the cars, and urge the members of these unions working in the railway company's power houses and shops in whatever capacity to strike in sympathy with the street car men. The resolutions go so far as to request the union musicians who furnish music at the parks controlled by the company to refuse to play for the daily concerts.

Arrangements All Complete.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 14.—The arrangements are all completed for the assembling of the southern industrial convention, which opens in this city on Tuesday. The sessions will be held in the Auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 4,500.

Labor Troubles Growing.

Tampa, Fla., May 14.—The labor troubles here have taken a turn for the worse. There is now a general strike in all the cigar factories of the Havana-American Co., in this city, and about 1,000 are out.

JEFFRIES STILL CHAMPION.

Jim Corbett Knocked Out in the Twenty-Third Round at the Seaside Athletic Club.

Coney Island, N. Y., May 11.—Jim Jeffries is still the heavyweight champion pugilist of the world. He defeated Jim Corbett in the 23d round of their fight at the Seaside Athletic club with a decisive knockout. The finishing blow came as a sudden and startling surprise. Corbett had been making a wonderful battle. His defense was absolutely perfect, and while he was lacking in strength, he had more than held his own and stood an excellent chance of winning the fight had it gone the limit. He had not been badly punished and had managed to mark his man severely.

The winning punch was a short left jab to the jaw. Corbett dropped like a weight and was clear out. Jeffries showed ability to take a punching at any distance and punched hard. He was clearly outboxed, and at times made to look like a novice. The crowd, which numbered fully 8,000, was with Corbett, and his defeat fell upon a silent crowd. There were cheers given him when he revived and left the ring, and was generally shown more consideration than the victor.

Corbett is still a factor in the pugilistic game. He has regained much of his old-time form. The battle was clean, and it is doubtful if there was a single infraction of the rules. The crowd was most orderly.

DECLARES FOR EXPANSION.

The President of the Cotton Spinners Says We Need More Markets—The "Open Door" in China.

Charleston, S. C., May 12.—The meeting of the southern cotton spinners, which is being held here, is one of the most important meetings of textile manufacturers ever held in the south. At the first meeting J. H. McAden was re-elected president and George R. Heiss secretary and treasurer.

Special cars brought into town men from the north. The most important feature was President McAden's address, in which he declared for expansion. He said we must hold the Philippines as an outlet for our great increased production. There should also, he said, be a vigorous policy in favor of the "open door" in China.

WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Patients Will Be Treated in a New Hospital in Boston With Non-Alcoholic Medicine.

Boston, May 12.—Boston is to have a free non-alcoholic hospital in the near future.

Mrs. H. S. Morley talked before the Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society on the need of a temperance hospital in Boston, where patients are treated without alcoholic medicines. Letters were read from Senator Lodge and congressman Gillett and Roberts. It is proposed that the plan of treating patients without alcohol be tried here at the Deaconesses' Methodist Hospital and at the Baptist Hospital in Brooklyn. It was thought that work could be started in the denominational institutions, and later the temperance hospital will become possible.

Unwelcome Japanese.

Victoria, B. C., May 12.—There are over 400 more of the unwelcome Japanese immigrants waiting at the quarantine station, whither they have been landed from the steamer Skih. These 400 are nearly all for the United States, but only 200 will be carried through direct. A large number of the Japanese are weavers coming under a contract made with them by a Japanese firm in New York. Are they engaged to work in some New England mills?

Outcome of a Long-Standing Quarrel.

Pine Bluff, Ark., May 12.—J. S. Estes shot and probably fatally wounded Dr. J. O. Cook on East Barreque street. Samuel Flies, a bystander received a wound in the leg from Estes' revolver. Estes fired six shots, three of them taking effect in Cook's body. The shooting is the result of a quarrel of long standing. Estes is a brother of Z. N. Estes, a prominent Memphis man. He was arrested and refused bail.

Ship Abandoned at Sea.

London, May 12.—The Norwegian ship Superb, Capt. Hamer, from Rio Janeiro, February 17, for Middlesbrough, England, was abandoned, dismantled, on April 27, in latitude 33 north, longitude 32 west. Her crew were rescued by the British bark Seafarer, Capt. Farmer, from San Francisco, January 12, for Hull, and transferred by her to the tug Oceana, which has landed them at Portland.

To Be Guests of Honor.

Washington, May 12.—Survivors of the first republican national convention are to be guests of honor in Philadelphia next month. Invitations will be sent to them next Monday. Only 15 survive, of all those who assembled in Pittsburgh, Pa., on June 18, 1856, to enunciate new principles and to bring into existence a new party.

Bank President Suicides.

Edinburgh, Scotland, May 12.—H. H. Norrie, manager of the Union bank of Scotland, was found dead Friday morning at his residence. His head was half blown away by a gun. Apparently he committed suicide. His action is attributed to the fact that he had been suffering from influenza.

Twelve Buildings Burned.

Tecumseh, Okla., May 12.—Fire Friday destroyed twelve buildings, including five stores, offices and residences. The loss amounts to $30,000, with $4,000 insurance.

HILONGOS AND MAASIN.

After Heavy Loss, Filipinos Abandon the Towns to Our Troops.

The Americans Had Three Casualties. All Members of the 43d Volunteer Infantry—Runners of a Native Uprising.

Manila, May 14.—The towns of Hilongos and Maasin, island of Leyte, have been occupied by troops of the 43d volunteer infantry. The insurgents opposed the landing of the Americans and sustained heavy losses. The Americans had three casualties.

The latest rumor of an outbreak in Manila among the natives, which was a circulation last week, was seriously dismissed by some of the local papers, and attracted more general attention than has usually been the case with this sort of thing. As a matter of fact, many Filipinos did leave their American employers with the apparent intention of joining some such movement. Their action, taken in connection with the arrest of several natives for carrying concealed weapons and the dispersion of several suspicious gatherings, gave color to the reports.

The officials have been active in the matter, but are not inclined to think an uprising will be attempted. They believe the Filipinos lacking in the necessary courage, especially in view of the fact that the natives feared to attempt the demonstration at the time of Gen. Lawton's funeral, although they had made careful preparations and many insurgents had come to Manila for this express purpose.

A paper found among the captured effects of Gen. Pantaleon Garcia asserts that the United States congress has done nothing for the Filipinos, and that, therefore, all Filipinos who are working for Americans must leave their employers immediately or suffer the penalty of treason.

One report is that the Filipino junta is endeavoring to incite an outbreak in order to show the civil commission that the insurrection is still alive.

It does not seem probable that the peace proposals which Senor Buencamino, at one time a member of the so-called Filipino government, has drawn up for submission to Aguinaldo and the other insurgent leaders will have much weight with the Filipinos. Buencamino's reputation, gained in former wars, is that of a man who hurries to get on the winning side. He was in disfavor with the Filipinos even before the collapse of their government, owing to a widespread suspicion of disloyalty to his colleagues.

Last week Gen. MacArthur received a large number of officials—consuls, officers and representatives of commercial bodies. To Lieut. Col. Crowder, his military secretary, he will assign many duties heretofore devolving upon the adjutant general. This step is taken in view of the increasing importance of the post of governor general. MacArthur's policy appears to involve considerable decentralization. He will give to his staff matters of detail and will devote himself largely to questions of policy.

A BIG MORTGAGE.

One for $22,000,000 Given by the Chicago & Alton Road—It Contained 11 $1,000 Revenue Stamps.

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—A mortgage given by the Chicago & Alton Railway Co. for $22,000,000 to the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., trustees, at New York, was filed for record Saturday in the office of the county recorder of deeds. It contained 11 $1,000 revenue stamps. The mortgage is given to secure the payment of three and one-half per cent. first lien fifty year gold bonds of the denomination of $1,000 each, and multiples thereof in case of registered bonds to the amount of $22,000,000.

Cadets Entertained.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 13.—The cadets of the Kentucky university visited Chickamauga park and other points of interest in a body. They are the most admired visitors of the carnival, and there will be a great deal of regret over their departure Monday, when they will return to Lexington. The cadets were entertained with a brilliant ball.

Choked While Eating Pie.

Hagerstown, Md., May 13.—Mrs. Martha Fry, of Sharpsburg, while eating a piece of pie at dinner, choked. The obstruction is believed to be a pin or needle which fell into the dough. Doctors performed an operation on her throat to remove the obstruction, but they were unable to locate it. She will die.

Butler Made Chairman.

Sioux City, S. D., May 13.—The popular national committee met here and organized by the election of the following officers: Chairman, Senator Marion Butler, North Carolina; vice chairman, J. H. Edmiston, Nebraska; treasurer, W. D. Washburn, Massachusetts; secretary, J. A. Edgerton, Colorado.

Took Carbolic Acid and Died.

Chicago, May 14.—After writing a note of farewell to his former sweetheart, Harry S. Barrett, prosperous in business and heir to an estate worth $25,000, took carbolic acid and died. The suicide is attributed to Barrett's despondency.

Trusts Developing in Germany.

Berlin, May 14.—The printing paper manufacturers have organized with 70 per cent. of the trade. The result is that prices have risen to 25 pfennigs per kilo. The sheet iron dealers are negotiating for a syndicate.

SLEPT AT HIS POST.

Engineer, Fireman and Five Tramps Killed in a Railway Wreck in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 13.—Frank Lantel, a tower operator in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., stationed at the entrance of the tunnel under Twenty-fifth street, just outside of Fairmount park, it is claimed, slept at his post. As a result a disastrous rear-end freight collision occurred early Saturday in the tunnel, causing the death of Engineer George Loeb and Fireman George Hinchman, and it is believed five tramps were stealing a ride. Fire followed the wreck, and a dozen or more firemen were injured while fighting the flames, and are now in the hospitals.

All of the dead were still in the wreckage Saturday forenoon, and the fire department was unable to extinguish the flames, which slowly consumed the demolished cars. Operator Lantel disappeared and the police are looking for him.

The vicinity of the tunnel after the accident became the scene of wild excitement. No one could approach nearer than within 200 feet of either opening owing to the volume of flame and smoke which is issuing therefrom. The fast New York-bound express freight train of 38 cars reached the tunnel on time and slowed down so that some of the cars could be shifted. The second section of the same train, composed of 39 cars, was due about ten minutes later. It was Towerman Lantel's duty to signal the second section that the first had stopped in the tunnel. This Lantel failed to do, having, it is said, fallen asleep. The second section approached the tunnel at a rapid rate of speed and crashed with full force into the first section. Engineer Loeb and Fireman Hinchman of the second section were immediately crushed to death and the cars piled in an indiscriminate mass began to burn. Four oil cars exploded, adding to the horror of the situation and feeding the flames. A fire alarm was turned in and firemen immediately began an endeavor to extinguish the flames. No attempt was made to secure the bodies of the dead, as it was impossible to get near the point where they lay. The loss to the company is estimated at $140,000.

MANY PEOPLE HOMELESS.

A Fire in Camden, N. J., Destroyed Ten Stores and About Fifty Small Dwellings.

Camden, N. J., May 14.—Fire which broke out in the Farmers' Market house, at Fifth and Federal streets, completely destroyed that building, ten stores and about 50 small dwellings, causing a loss estimated at $125,000 and rendering homeless about 250 persons. The origin of the fire is believed to be that boys either accidentally or purposely set fire to a large pile of tarred lumber which had been stored in the market house.

The principal losses were: The Farmers' Market, $15,000; Cowgill chemical laboratory, $10,000; M. L. Mowis, florist, $2,000; J. Z. Blak, clothing, $1,500; Harry Grosscup, dwelling, $2,000; W. Z. Gibson, grocery, $3,000, and W. H. Docker, umbrellas, $2,000.

Most of the others to suffer were small property owners. Many of the occupants of the dwellings lost all their household effects. The losses are partly covered by insurance.

THROWN AGAINST A POLE.

Two Persons Killed and Two Injured in a Runaway Accident at Knoxville, Tenn.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 12.—M. J. Condon, a railroad conductor, of Knoxville, and Mortimer F. Shea, clerk of the New York surrogate court, were killed here in a runaway. Mrs. Condon was seriously injured and Mrs. Shea slightly.

The men were thrown against a telephone pole, dying almost instantly. Shea and his wife were here on a pleasure trip and were out driving with the Condons.

Displayed Bravery and Nerve.

Jeffersonville, Ind., May 14.—Chas. A. Henthorne, 30 years old, died at his home in Otisco, Ind., above Jeffersonville. Several years ago Henthorne won a national reputation through the press by his bravery while caught under a wreck in the northern part of Indiana. For over four hours he lay under a coach and refused to be taken out until after every one else was removed from the wreck. Finally, his hands and arms being free, he took an ax and helped cut himself out. Both legs were mashed off above the knees, but he recovered.

Fatal Shooting on the Street.

Pine Bluff, Ark., May 13.—J. S. Estes shot and probably fatally wounded Dr. J. O. Cook on East Barreque street. Samuel Flies, a bystander, received a wound in the leg from Estes' revolver. Estes fired six shots, three of them taking effect in Cook's body. The shooting is the result of a quarrel of long standing.

Elections in Paris.

Paris, May 14.—The second ballots in the municipal election in Paris Sunday in the districts left without definite results on May 6 have given the nationalists 20 out of 30 seats. This is a rebuff of the Waldeck-Rousseau cabinet.

Pochothontas Coal in Germany.

Berlin, May 14.—A shipment of Pochothontas coal arrived at ports on the upper Rhine, where it brought $6 per ton, which is above the German price. The quality, however, is admittedly better.

GOT AWAY IN SAFETY.

Boers Took All Their Guns, Etc., When They Left Kroonstad.

Many of the Correspondents at the Front Announce That the War Is Practically Over—No News From Gen. Buller.

London, May 14.—The news of the occupation of Kroonstad by Lord Roberts without resistance causes great rejoicing here. Although the troops marched 16 miles, they were in excellent form on entering the town. The union jack was hoisted in the market place by Mrs. Lockhead, the American wife of a Scotchman. The Boers are now trekking to the Vaal river, where they are entrenching. Gen. French encamped northeast of the town and dispatched a force to cut the line. The project succeeded late at night, but, unfortunately, after the departure of the last train.

The arrival of Lord Roberts was hailed with enthusiasm by all the British inhabitants. Three hundred Free Staters were anxious to surrender. The bridge to the south had not been destroyed, but the large bridge near the town had been demolished. The Irish brigade with the federals burned the goods shed. According to the townspeople, many of them were drunk.

It appears that the Boers had been reinforced by 3,000 men from Natal last Friday, and that altogether 10,000 men with 20 guns made an ineffectual stand at Boschrand. They had elaborate entrenchments in front of Kroonstad, which offered great facilities for a rear guard action. Their only anxiety, however, appears to have been to get away safely with all their guns and convoys, which again they have successfully accomplished. The few stores they were unable to carry away they burned.

President Steyn is represented as having been frantic and as having kicked and cursed the burghers after vainly imploring them to continue the fight.

"The war is practically over," says the Daily Chronicle's Kroonstad correspondent, and in less definite terms this is the view to be gathered from all the correspondents. They picture the Boers as utterly demoralized and disheartened by Lord Roberts' unexpectedly rapid advance and by his facile turning of the carefully prepared positions of the Boers.

Experience has taught the critics to be chary of accepting reports of Boer demoralization. The Times says: "The signs point to military breakdown on the part of the Boers, but after experience of the past we can not accept the reports of demoralization without reserve. The game of war must be strictly played out to the end."

Lintley, the new Free State capital, is 45 miles southeast of Kroonstad, half way to Bethlehem, and was probably selected as a convenient rendezvous for the commandoes now retiring before Gen. Brabant and Gen. Buller in the Thaba N'Chu district. Brabant has occupied Hoepollok, half way on the road from Thaba N'Chu to Ladybrand.

There is not a word of news regarding Gen. Buller's movements or from the far western side. Nothing is known, therefore, of the progress of the Mafeking relief column.

MINISTERIAL CRISIS.

Spain Is Greatly Excited, and the Country Is Said to Be on the Verge of a Revolution.

Madrid, May 12.—The newspapers here are discussing the existence of a ministerial crisis. Precisely at noon the stores here were closed by the proprietors, and dispatches from the provinces show that similar action was universal in the large towns. No serious disorders have thus far been cautious have been taken in the provincial places.

The government has called out the gendarmie in Madrid, and police precautions have been taken in the provincial towns.

At a cabinet council Senor Silvela, the premier, declared that he wished to respect all political opinions, but to repress any attempt to disturb the tranquility of the country.

Ashantis Striving for Independence.

Accra, Gold Coast, May 12.—Serious reports are current that the Ashantis are determined to throw off the British yoke, that they have secured the co-operation of eight other tribes and that they are now able to raise 50,000 warriors.

Famine Reports Confirmed.

London, May 12.—In the house of commons the secretary of state for India, Lord George Hamilton, confirmed the reports heretofore received of the excessive famine in India and the mortality therefrom.

'TIS WELL

Happy beyond we cannot see;
 Better by far that we should smile at first.
 Happy we do not know or fear the worst;
 A little while from apprehension free,
 We dream of cooling waters as we thirst;
 'Tis well we cannot see!
 Father: 'tis well we cannot see
 That all our human artifices are vain;
 All things must vanish that we seek to gain;
 Our substances are shadows and they flee;
 The paths of pleasure, leading on to pain,
 Meet at Gethsemane!
 I thank Thee, Lord, I did not see
 Far down my life's cold, rocky road;
 I could not know the grievous, heavy load
 Which thou that turns to sorrow, and must be
 At once a beckoning phantom and a good Thing at Gethsemane!

CHAPTER XVIII.—CONTINUED.

Shouts, wheels and flashing lights were again at the entrance gate, even as Mrs. Frank, sparkling with animation, distributing her gay good humor over the silent semicircle, suddenly exclaimed: "Oh, if I'd only known you were here, I could have provided the one thing to make our reunion complete! If I were not going on at Bayrak I should do it yet." They bowed and wheels and lights had come to a stop at the front of the house, and in measured, martial tread a man's footsteps were heard upon the lanai. Then, all of a sudden, with a cry of joy, Withe burst in again: "Should do it—I shall do it! Said I not I was the fairy queen? Behold me summon my subjects from the ends of the obedient earth!" And, waving her parasol as she would a wand, gayly pirouetting as she had that night in the tent at old Camp Merritt, she danced forward: "Sound ye the trumpets, slaves! Hail to the chief! See the conquering hero comes! Enter Brevet Brig. Gen. Stanley Armstrong!—though his arm is anything but strong."

Flourishing gravely to the sprite in front of him, vaguely to the group in the shaded light at the edge of the lanai, and joyously to the little hostess, as almost hysterically she sprang forward and clasped his hands, the colonel of the Pineaval Dudes stood revealed before them.

"Col. Armstrong! How—when did you get here? What does this mean? Is your arm quite well again? Why didn't you let us know you were coming?" were the questions rained upon him by Mrs. Marsden, immediately followed by the somewhat illogical statement that she was actually breathless with surprise.

"Shall I answer in their order?" said he, smiling down at her flushed and joyous face. "By the Sedgwick. This afternoon. That I wished to see you. Doing quite well. Because I didn't know my self until two days before we sailed." Then, as he stood peering beyond her, she would have turned him to her other guests had not Mrs. Garrison made instant and impulsive rush upon him.

"As fairy queen or fairy godmother I claim first speech," she gayly cried. "What tidings of my little lord, and where is he, my fairy sister?" she demanded, waving in front of him her shiny parasol and pirouetting with almost girlish grace.

"Capt. Garrison was looking fairly well the day I sailed," he answered, briefly, "and Col. Frost left for Hong-Kong only a few hours before in hopes, as we understand, of finding Mrs. Frost at Yokohama. Permit me," he added, with grave courtesy, "I have but little time, as I transfer to the Doric to-night."

A shade spread over the radiant face one instant, but was as quickly swept away. "And I have not met your guests," he finished, turning to Mrs. Marsden as he spoke and quietly passing Mrs. Garrison in so doing. The next moment he was shaking hands with the entire party, coming last of all to Amy Lawrence.

"They told me of your being here," he said, looking straight into her clear, beautiful eyes; "and I thought I might find you at Mrs. Marsden's. She was our best friend when we were in Honolulu. They told me, too, that you desired to go by the Doric, but feared she would be crowded," he continued, turning to Mr. Prime. "There is one vacant stateroom now. Its occupants have decided to stay over and visit the islands. There will be, I think, another." And drawing a letter from an inner pocket he calmly turned to Nita, now shrinking almost fearfully behind her sister. "The colonel gave this to me to hand to you, Mrs. Frost, on the chance of your being here. He will arrive by next week's steamer, and, pardon me, it is something I think you should see at once, as a change in your plans may be necessary."

It was vain for Margaret to interpose. The letter was safely lodged in her sister's hands, and with so significant a message that it had to be opened and read without delay. Gayly excusing herself, and with a low reverence and comprehensive smile to the assembled party, she ushered her sister into the big parlor, and the curtain fell behind them. There followed a few minutes of brisk conference upon the lanai, the Marsdens pleading against the father and daughter for immediate return to the hotel, there to claim the vacant rooms aboard the steamer. In the eager discussion, pro and con, both young soldiers joined, both saying "go," and promising to follow by the Sedgwick.

In this family council, despite the vivid interest Armstrong felt in the result, neither Amy Lawrence nor himself took any part. Side by side at the snowy railing over the breaking sea they stood almost silent listeners. Suddenly there came from the front again the sound of hoofs and wheels, loud and distinct at the start, then rapidly dying away with the increasing distance. Miss Lawrence turned and looked inquiringly into the eyes she well knew were fixed upon her. Mrs. Marsden hesitated one moment, then stepped across the lanai, peered into the parlor and entered. It was a minute before she returned, and in that minute the decisive vote was cast, the carriage ordered.

"Oh, I ought to have known how it would be if I left you a moment!" she cried, despairingly, on her reappearance, a little folded paper in her hand. "But at least you must stay half an hour. We can telephone direct to the dock and secure the staterooms, if you must go on the Doric. Yes," she continued, lowering her voice, "they are not going farther until Col. Frost comes. Mrs. Garrison explains that her sister was really too ill and too weak to come out here, but she thought the drive might do her good. She thought best to slip quietly away with her, and bids me say good night to you all."

So, when next day the Doric sailed, four new names appeared upon the passenger list, and the last men down the stage, already "treasuring on the rise," were two young fellows in white uniforms, who turned as they sprang to the dock and waved their jaunty caps. "Join you in ten days at 'Frisco!" shouted the shorter of the two, gazing upward and backward at the quartette on the promenade deck. "Oh! beg a thousand pardons," he added, hastily, as he bumped against some slender object, and, wheeling about to pick up a flimsy white fan, he found himself face to face with Withe Garrison, her chief waving, beaming, smiling, throwing kisses innumerable to the party he had so lately left. The hot blood rushed to his forehead, an angry light to his eyes, as he nodded, blithely, forbearingly, forgivingly at him. "Dear boy," she cried, in her clear, penetrating treble, "how could you be expected to see anyone after leaving—her?" But Gov's arm was linked in his at the very instant and led him glowering away, leaving her close to the edge of the crowded dock, smiling sweetness, blessing and bliss upon a silent and unresponsive group, and waving kerchief and kisses to them until, far from shore, the Doric headed out to sea.

They were nearing home again. Day and night for nearly a week the gull ship had borne them steadily onward over a sea of deepest blue, calm and unruffled as the light that shone in Amy's eyes. Hours of each twenty-four Armstrong had been the constant companion, at first of the trio, then of the two—for Mr. Prime had found a kindred spirit in a veteran merchant homeward bound from China—then of one alone; for Miss Prime had found another interest and favor in the eyes of a young tourist paying his first visit to our shores, and so it happened that before the voyage, all too brief, was half over Amy Lawrence and Armstrong walked the spacious deck for hours alone or sat in sheltered nooks, gazing out upon the sea. The soft summer breezes of the first few days had given place to keener, chillier air. The fog ahead told of the close proximity of the Parallones. Heavier wraps had replaced the soft fabrics of the Hawaiian saunterings. But warmth and gladness, coupled with a strange, new shyness in his presence, were glowing in her fresh young heart. One day she had said to him: "You have not told me how you came to leave there—just now," and it was a moment before he answered.

"That was the surgeons' doing. They sent me back from the front because the wound did not properly heal, and then ordered a sea voyage until it did; but I turn back at once from San Francisco."

She was silent a few seconds. This was unlooked-for and unwelcome news. "I thought," she said, "at least Gov. heard Dr. Frank say it would be four months before you could use that arm." She plucked at the fringe of the heavy shawl he had wrapped about her as she reclined in the low steamer chair; but the white lids veiled her eyes.

"Possibly," answered Armstrong; "but, you see, I do not have to use it much at any time. I'm all right otherwise, and there will soon be need of me."

"More campaigning?" she anxiously inquired, her eyes one moment uplifted.

"Probably. Those fellows have no idea of quitting."

Another interval of silence. The long, lazy, rolling swell of the Pacific had changed during the day to an abrupt and tumultuous upheaval that tossed the Doric like a cork and made locomotion a problem. The rising wind and sea sent the spray whirling from her bows, and Mildred's young man, casting about for a dry corner, had deposited his fair charge on a bench along the forward deck house and was scouting up and down for steamer chairs. Armstrong had drawn his close to that in which Miss Lawrence reclined, her knitted steamer cap pulled well forward over her brow. His feet were braced against a stanchion. His eyes were intent upon her sweet face. He had no thought for other men, even those in similar plight. His gaze, though unhampered by the high peak of his forage cap, comprehended nothing beyond the rounded outline of that soft cheek. Her eyes, well-nigh hidden by her shrouding "Tam," saw the searching son of Albion and told her his need. The best of women will find excuse for interruption at such moments when sure of the devotion of the man who sits with a fateful question quivering on his lips; and even when she longs to hear those very words, will find means to defer them as a kitten dandles with a captured mouse or a child saves to the very last the sweetest morsel of her birthday cake. Not ten minutes before, when Hon. Bertie Shafro had started impulsively toward the vacant chair by Armstrong's side, a firm hand detained him, and Miss Prime had hastily interposed. "Not on any account!" said she, imperiously. "Can't you see?" And Mr. Shafro, adjusting his monocle, had gazed long and fixedly at them, transferring his gaze to her, and had said:

"Eh—eh—yes. It's not ours, I suppose you mean."

But now Amy Lawrence was beckoning, and he made a rush for the rail, then worked his way aft, hand over hand. Every movable on deck was taking a sudden slant to starboard, and the sea went hissing by almost on level with the deck as next she spoke. "Surely a soldier needs both arms in battle, and you—Oh, certainly, Mr. Shafro, take that chair," she added. Armstrong glanced up suddenly.

"Oh! that you, Shafro? Yes; take it by all means."

Anything, thought he, rather than that they should come here. The young Briton stepped easily past between them and the rail—behind there was no room—and, swinging the long, awkwardly modeled fabric to his broad shoulder, started back just as a huge wave heaved suddenly under the counter, heeled the steamer far over to port, threw him off his balance, and, his foot catching at the bottom of her chair, hurled him, head and all, straight at Amy's reclining form. One instant, and even her uplifted hands could not have saved her face; but in that instant Armstrong had darted in, caught the stumbling Briton on one arm, and the full force of the shooting chair crashing upon the other, already pierced by Filipino lead.

When, a moment later, she emerged, safe and unscathed, from the confused heap of men and furniture, it was to cut off instantly the snigger and stammer of poor Shafro's apologies, to bid him go instantly for the ship's doctor, and, with face the color of death, to turn quickly to Armstrong. The blow had burst open the half-healed wound, and the blood was streaming to the deck.

Both liner and transport turned back without Stanley Armstrong. Doric and Sedgwick sailed unheeded, for the highest surgical authority of the department of California had remanded him to quarters at the Palace and forbidden his return to duty with an unhealed wound. He was sitting up again, somewhat pallid and not too strong, but with every promise, said the "medico," of complete recovery within two months. But not a month would Armstrong wait. The Puebla was to start within the week, and he had made up his mind. "Go," said he, "I must."

"You have not told me how you came to leave there."

They had been sitting about him, the night this opinion was announced, in the parlor of the suite of rooms the Primes had taken. Billy Gray had gone with his father to the club, Shafro had been hanging about in the agonies of an Englishman's first love. Gov disappeared a moment and came back with tickets for the Columbia, bidding Mildred get her hat and gloves at once, and whispering to Shafro that he had a seat for him. As the little mantel clock struck eight Amy Lawrence, lifting up her eyes from the book she was trying hard to believe she meant to read, saw that Armstrong was rising from his easy chair, and, springing to his side, laying her white hand on his arm, she faltered: "Oh, please! You know the stipulation was that you were not to stir."

But then her heart began to flutter uncontrollably. The blood went surging to her brows, for all of a sudden, as through impulse irresistible, her hand was seized in his—in both of his, in fact—and the deep voice that had pleaded at her behalf for the cause of Billy Gray was now, in impetuous flow of words that fell upon her ears like some strain of thrilling music, pleading at last his own. Ever since that day in the radiant sunshine of the park she had learned to look up to him as a tower of strength, a mark of mark among his fellows, a man to be honored and obeyed. Ever since that night at the Palace, when she saw his glowing eyes fixed intently upon her, and knew that he was following her every move, she had begun to realize the depth of his interest in her. Ever since that day when the China slipped from her moorings, with Withe Garrison singling him out for lavish farewell favors, she had wondered why it so annoyed and stung her. Ever since the day she read the list of killed and wounded in the first fierce battling with the "insurrectos" she knew it was the sight of his name, not Billy Gray's, that made her for the moment faint and dizzy and taught her the need of greater self-control. Ever since that moonlit night upon the Marsden's lanai, when her heart leaped at the sudden sound of his voice, she had realized what his coming meant to her, and ever since that breezy day upon the broad Pacific with the sailors' song of Land, ho! ringing from the bows, and he, her wounded soldier, had sprung to shield her from the crash of Shafro's hapless stumble, and the deck was stained with the precious blood from that soldier's reopened wound, shed for her—for who so revered him—she had longed to hear him say the words that alone could unlock the gates of maidenly reserve and let her tell him—tell him with glad and grateful heart that the love he bore her was answered by her own. Hovering over him only one minute, her lips half parted, her eyes still veiled, her heart throbbing loud and fast, with sudden movement she threw herself upon her knees at the side of the low chair, and her burning face, ever so lightly, was buried in the dark blue sleeve above that blessed wound.

THE END.

HOW A CLAIM PAID.

An Alaska Miner Tells of One Way of Getting Money Without Panning It Out.

"There are more ways of making money off of a claim than panning it out," said an Alaska miner who had some luck with his pick and shovel. "For instance, I knew a man of means in the Dawson district who had a claim which had failed to be as profitable as expected, and he didn't know just what to do with it, to get his money back, until he had devoted considerable thought to it. And it was simple enough when he knew how. He quietly went to the gold commissioner and announced that he wished to pay his ten per cent. royalty on the product of his claim for a year, which was $60,000. The commissioner accepted the $6,000 royalty and gave him the usual receipt, stating on its face what it was for, with the number of the claim, location, etc. Then he 'waited patiently about,' like Mary's little lamb, and one day, in the course of human events, an Englishman came along looking for a good thing for some people who had money to spend. He asked Mr. Blank, among other things, what he had to sell, and the smooth gent told him he didn't know exactly, but he would show him his goods. They looked over several claims that were practically unworked, and then in a casual way Mr. Blank showed the Englishman his receipt for royalty on claim so and so. 'And, you know,' he said, with a wink, 'that a man isn't paying royalty on any more than he can possibly help.'"

"The Englishman was right on to that little game, of course, and he sized up the $6,000 receipt, looked over the claim in a general way and ended by buying it for $150,000."—Washington Star.

The Advantage of Position.
 The late Charles Haddon Spurgeon was not one of those geniuses who suddenly become a revelation to their friends. As a child he was exceedingly intelligent, and his subsequent development was continuous. His schoolmaster looked to him whenever a question had long gone unanswered. One winter's day, however, when the weather was bitter cold, a change seemed to come over the boy. His answers went wide of the mark. Soon he dropped to the bottom of the class and stayed there. The teacher was puzzled; his prize pupil seemed to have lost every spark of intelligence. But as he thought, he noticed that Spurgeon, at the foot of the class, sat right in front of the stove. It took but a moment to re-arrange the pupils. The head boy was given the warm seat, and Spurgeon was placed next the window. Then the questions began again. The change was complete. From that moment Spurgeon did not hesitate for the right answer. Five minutes later he was once more at the head of the class, sitting in front of the stove.—Youth's Companion.

A Boer Toast.

A band of Boer ambulance men met after one of the recent engagements in South Africa an English patrol. The Boers were very thirsty, and asked the men of the patrol to give them a little water. "With pleasure," they replied, "if you will drink it to the health of the queen." The Boers, after consulting together, replied that they had no objection to drinking to the health of the queen, for whom they felt much respect, provided that they might add to the toast "and to the damnation of Cecil Rhodes," as they regarded the latter as the cause why men who had no ill-feeling toward each other were fighting. To this the patrol willingly assented, and joined themselves in the toast thus expounded.—London Truth.

Henry Clay and the Hunter.
 When Henry Clay was stumpng Kentucky for re-election, at one of his mass meetings an old hunter of wide political influence said: "Well, Harry, I've always been for you, but because of that vote (which he named) I'm goin' agin you." "Let me see your rifle," said Clay. It was handed to him. "Is she a good rifle?" "Yes," replied the hunter. "Why didn't you throw her away?" The old hunter thought a moment; and then said: "Harry, I'll try you agin." And Harry was elected.—Chicago Chronicle.

Pronunciation of "Water."
 Mr. Clerk was pleading in a Scotch appeal before the house of lords. The question at issue was in regard to a right of water. Mr. Clerk, more Scotch, pronounced the word water. "Pray, Mr. Clerk," said one of the law peers, "do you spell water with two t's in Scotland?" "No, my lord," was the dignified and scorching answer of the great lawyer, "but we spell manners with two n's."—Notes and Queries.

Scientific Economy.
 "They say that Jorkus is very stingy." "Stingy? He's so stingy that he moistens his postage stamps only at the corners."—Chicago Record.

Chairman Jones' Opinion.

[Columbia-Journal.]
In response to an inquiry regarding the truth of the rumor that the Democratic National Committee had requested the Democratic Committee of the Seventh Kentucky district to modify its call so as to include all Democrats, Senator Jones stated that there had been no meeting of his committee since last February, and consequently there could have been no such action taken. He said, however, that a private citizen of Kentucky had written him in regard to the matter, and that he had expressed, as his individual opinion, that it would be better to include all Democrats in the call, as the policy should be to get back into the party all who desired to return.

"We must have," said the Senator, "more votes this year than we polled in 1896, if we are going to win, and I favor the carrying out of the spirit of the call of the National Committee in the district primaries. This call expressly states that all Democratic, conservative reform citizens of the United States irrespective of former political associations and differences are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the Kansas City convention."

Washington On Trusts.

(Ky. State Democrat.)
In 1779 General Washington's army was not in a very good condition. It needed food and clothing, in fact the soldiers were in rags, and with their officers lived on the plainest food, principally roots. Congress was struggling to supply him and his army with the necessities of life, but it had trouble with those who had the supplies, because they controlled the market and were not disposed to let them go without being paid their own price. It was then that Washington wrote Joseph Reed, president of congress, to the following effect:

"It gives me sincere pleasure to find that the assembly of Pennsylvania is so well disposed to second your endeavors in bringing those murderers of our cause, the monopolizers, forestallers and engrossers, to condign punishment. It is much to be lamented that each state, long ere this has not hunted them down as pests to society and the greatest enemies we have to the happiness of America."

"I would to God that some one of the most atrocious in each state was hung in gibbets upon a gallows five times as high as the one proposed by Haman."

"No punishment, in my opinion, is too great for the man who builds his greatness upon his country's ruin."

CADENZA.

Sing not to me, sweet,
The song that is sorrow,
Hearts that are young beat
With joy of tomorrow,
Gilding the kind cheer
With bliss that they borrow.

Hearts that are old fear
Thought of lost gladness,
Not for the duller ear
Music of sadness,
Out and alas, dear,
Memory is madness!

ODD TOWN OF CULLODEN.

The Liquor Element "Engineered" the Antis Out of the Village.

"I reckon we've got the oddest town in our state that there is in the United States," said a West Virginia man. "Ever hear of Culloden? I don't mean the clans of Culloden described by the poet Campbell. I mean Culloden, W. Va. Well, sir, about half the population of the town doesn't live in the town and can't vote in the town, although they are right in the town."

"I'll explain. The good people, and they are in the majority, too, are down on saloons and liquor in any shape. They got up a temperance meeting and purposed to drive the liquor men out of town. When you find a West Virginian who believes in liquor, you find a man who is ready to fight for it. The liquor people got together and in some way got the confidence of the town engineer. I don't know whether he was a liquor man or not, but they got him on their side. The engineer discovered that the town was not laid out right, and he got authority to change the metes and bounds. When he finished the job, the temperance people found out that they lived just outside of the line of the town, no matter what part of the town their houses were in. A man could stand in his back yard and talk to the man whose place was right up against his place and who was a voter, but the first man had lost his vote."

"The lines of the engineer excluded, as I have said, the temperance people. It took in the liquor folk all right. The map of Culloden as it is now looks a good deal like a sheet of paper after a fly with ink on its feet meanders across it. You can tell how a citizen of Culloden stands on the liquor question by the place where he builds a house. If he builds one, which doesn't often occur, in spite of its zigzag boundaries, however, Culloden is a contented community."—New York Sun.

Too Much Time Wanted.

"If you will get my new suit done by Saturday," said a customer to a tailor, "I'll be forever indebted to you."
"If that's your game," replied the tailor, "the clothes will not be done at all."—Ohio State Journal.

It has been calculated that the loss from illness averages 20,000,000 weeks of work in the year, or 2½ per cent of the work done by the whole population between 15 and 65 years of age.

JUVENILE APPAREL.

Our Boys' Clothing Department has ever been the most interesting place in town for parents and boys. Our efforts in the preparation of our stock for the forthcoming season have been crowned with unqualified success. Good taste, exclusive style, snap and serviceability, make every garment in our juvenile department—from the beautiful, fancy suits for the little boys of 3 to 5 years of age, to the tasteful patterns in Cheviots, Cassimeres, Tweeds and Worsted for the big boys and young men, aged 14 to 16 years.

THERE ISN'T A GARMENT TO WHICH YOU CAN TAKE THE SLIGHTEST EXCEPTION

either in style, quality or price. The question of price has been settled, we believe, to your satisfaction, long ago. Nothing that we offer can be sold, quality considered, as cheaply by any other house in town. Bring your boys, big and little. A fine line of wash suits.

If you cannot read this small print at a distance of 14 inches your eyesight is failing and should have immediate attention:

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centered and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greatest durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy Imperial spectacles of a reliable, skilful dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Next visit—Thursday, May 31, 1900. Hello, 170.

When we foregathered hame,
What annals change for lie between,
But we are still the same.
Ah, then you were my bonnie bride,
Wi' hair a' auburn-brown;
We dined care for things o' pride
That crazed the neebin' town.

Our house-hold altar we set up,
Ill-furnished but an' ben;
Aft drinkin' frae the self-same cup,
Nest mated poorth then?
Without, the daisied globe I ploughed,
You plied hand at the loom;
Let blast come down, we closer stood
And gied the stranger room.

For twa-score years we've held our ain,
He's had our ups an' downs,
To check thegither still fu' fain
Through fortune's smiles and frowns.
And now life's tale is well-nigh tauld,
Our sands are almost run;
The twilight's tremblin' star o' gold,
After the settin' sun.

THE FUNNY MAN

By Kennett F. Harris.

"I WOULD have been disappointed if you had told me that the man who dealt in grain through the medium of tapes and yellow bulletins to the chronic dyspeptic with the sad expression of countenance, 'I wouldn't have been the only one disappointed, either; the madam would have gone into mourning. She thinks you are about the whole thing when it comes to entertaining a miscellaneous crowd that never heard you before.'"

"That's good," said the dyspeptic, gratefully, as he seated himself at the lunch counter. "I like to hear that. It makes me think that I have not lived entirely in vain."

"Don't mention it," said the grain man. "I thought it would please you, so as it happened to be truth I said so. It wasn't any particular exertion to say it and I don't really deserve much credit. She told me once that she thought you were awfully funny, but she didn't know how funny you really are."

"At the same time," continued the dyspeptic, "I would rather have been invited for my more sterling and solid qualities. I thought that your wife knew and appreciated them. It galls when I am as good as told that it is the mere brilliancy—the moritificious brilliancy, I might say—of my conversational and anecdotal powers that has got me the bid."

"I wouldn't eat any more of those doughnuts if I were you," suggested the grain man. "You'll suffer for it later on and your family will suffer more or less, too. Honest, though, and not with any intention of stringing you, I'd like to know how you got it."

"In the legitimate way of business," replied the dyspeptic.

"I'm referring to that condescending gab of yours."

"I'm glad to notice that you don't fall into the popular error of thinking it comes naturally. I got it as all geniuses get their requirements, by hard work. As a kid I was diffident and reserved."

"You have got bravely over it."

"Certainly I have, but that was the way I started out. I was that kind of a kid that when I was on a visit to my Uncle George's I only opened my mouth once, except to put food into it. In the three weeks that I was there, of course you understand that I said 'Yes' and 'No' and 'Thank you, I believe I will take another piece,' but I didn't attempt anything in the conversational way."

"Except the once?"

"Except the once. The way that happened was that there was a marriage cousin at dinner that day and she had brought her baby along."

"We were about half way through the dinner and they were all talking about the baby. After awhile there was a let-up and I raised my eyes from the tablecloth and saw my married cousin was looking at me. I looked at her, too. She was not at all a bad-looking woman, but that wasn't why, exactly. I guess I just looked at her because I happened to and I hadn't the grit to break away. I felt that my face was getting hot. She smiled at me sort of encouragingly, but it didn't have a cooling effect. I realized that it was up to me to say something, so I said it. Even then I was not the boy to shirk a responsibility. I asked her: 'Is it a boy or a girl?'"

"The effect was something tremendous. My Uncle George let the carving knife drop on the floor, and my Cousin Caroline, who was rather a delicate kind of a girl, spluttered on a glass of water she was drinking. The rest of them didn't say anything—they just laughed. Say!"

"And my Uncle George wiped his eyes with his napkin and he remarked in a choky kind of a voice: 'Why, William, you're getting quite conversational.' Wouldn't that frost you?"

"I think," said the grain man, with a sort of thoughtful consideration, "I think that it would have nipped me about the edges, so that I think I'd have wilted and turned black in places after the sun got up."

"I should imagine it would," said the dyspeptic. "Anyway, I consider that was the beginning of my career as a prandial and postprandial speaker."

"It just sort of took out the cork," "Well, you can put it that way if you want to, but I should say it rather fired my ambition. If you are thinking about pie I can recommend that huckleberry; it's better than it looks."

"No, I realized for the first time how easily folks could be amused. My Uncle George never struck me as being a very funny man, although looking back from this distance I feel in my heart that if he appeared on a Chicago vaudeville stage with those whiskers of his the audience would have 17 different kinds of mirthful fits. But we were all used to his whiskers, of course, and there wasn't anybody in our simple little community that seemed to consider them particularly remarkable."

"I haven't a hobby," said the grain man, musingly. "I never had time, but if I had time to devote myself seriously I would love to make a collection of the remarkable whiskers I have met from day to day. But you were going to say—"

"I was going to say that I made up my mind that the next time I went to see my Uncle George I would make him look and feel like 30 cents when it came to setting the table in a roar. So as soon as I got home I sent for a jest book."

"It was a jest book in primrose paper covers, and it cost me one dime in silver. It was dirt cheap. One of the jests was this—I remember it well, having memorized it at the time, with about 30 others. I used to go out into the barn and recite them, and I practiced facial expression before a broken bit of looking glass that the hired man used when he shaved on Sundays. Yes, I remember that little jeu d'esprit mighty well: 'A man left a bonny steed in the street, and coming back a short time afterward discovered that a funny youth had placed a card against the fleshless ribs bearing the notice: "Oats wanted inquire within."'"

"Was that the joke?" inquired the grain man.

"That was the joke. There were others, but that was the one that I settled on for my maiden effort. There was another one that I thought was nearly as good, about a woman who rang her own doorbell three times before she roused the servant, who excused herself on the plea that she only heard the third ring. I thought that joke was a corker, but not quite up to the one about oats."

"I told the oat story to a venerable and kindly old jay named Baldwin. Everybody called him 'Uncle' Jerry Baldwin—you know the kind. He was sitting on a bucket turned upside down in the doorway of the livery stable. When I tackled him I said:

"I wouldn't eat any more of those doughnuts."

"Uncle Jerry, I've got something to tell you—it's a joke," And he said: 'Go ahead, sonny bug; I guess I can stand it.' And I told him."

"He drew down his jaw and scratched the hollow under his cheekbone. When I got through he didn't laugh, although I expected him to any minute. All he did was to look carefully around and then reach out and grab me. He carried me into the office under his arm and then sat down so that he could do it easy and basted me with the back of a currycomb until he couldn't baste me any longer. Then he shook me. Finally he said: 'That'll learn you, by George, you young cub,' and let me go."

"Didn't he explain himself more fully?" asked the grain merchant.

"I didn't ask him for any explanation just then," replied the dyspeptic, "but I kind of understood Uncle Jerry's feelings when I saw his team as he drove out of town. I don't blame him for thinking I meant something personal."

The dyspeptic rose and brushed the crumbs from his waistcoat and the grain merchant did likewise. As they went out the dyspeptic said: "Do you know what is the difference between photography and whooping cough? Of course you don't. One makes families and the other makes sick families."

The grain merchant groaned heavily.—Chicago Daily Record.

Conjugating a Verb.
A United States consul recently returned here gives the following account of how English is taught in the French schools: "Jean, you will stand up," said the master to his brightest pupil upon the occasion of the consul's visit. "Now conjugate the verb 'I have a gold mine.'" "I have a gold mine," responded the bright pupil, with scarcely an accent. "You have a gold mine, he has a gold mine, we have a gold mine, you have a gold mine, they have a gold mine."

THE LONELIEST WOMAN.

She Is from Washington and Lives
Away Up North on a Seal Island.

Without doubt the loneliest woman—that is to say, the one farthest removed from her kind—in all these United States of America is Mrs. Clark, of this city, the wife of Maj. E. W. Clark, government agent of the Pribylof or Seal islands in the Behring sea. This group, says the Washington Star, composed of the two small islands of St. Paul and St. George, are the homes of nearly all the seals remaining in existence, and they are about 1,800 miles west of the entrance to Puget sound, and about 200 northwest of the Aleutian islands, beginning at Unimak pass. St. George, which is the smaller of the two, being about six by twelve miles in extent, is 40 miles from St. Paul, and it has a population of about 100 Aleuts and four or five whites, consisting of Maj. Clark and his wife, a physician and two or three clerks for the North American Commercial company, which controls the seal business and has stores and warehouses on both islands. The little village of St. George contains 25 or 30 houses, including the company's buildings, the agent's house and a Greek church. There are no other houses on the islands, and Mrs. Clark is the only white woman. Her home is a small cottage of four rooms, very cozy and comfortable, with books and pictures, and a fine outlook over the sea. She does no cooking in her own house, as the government officials take their meals at the company house, near by. Mrs. Clark's nearest neighbor is the wife of the agent on St. Paul, who is less lonely because she has with her two small children. Mrs. Clark's children being grown and having their own homes in the states. There is no communication between the islands except by one of the company's ships and by revenue cutters, as other ships are not permitted to visit the islands. These ships come only in the summer, and from October until June Mrs. Clark does not expect to see anyone or hear anything from the United States, or to send word home, no matter what happens. Sickness, death, disaster may come to her far off in that forbidding sea, or may visit her own at home, but no word may come or go until navigation is resumed. St. George is absolutely without trees, but its rolling surface and mountains, a thousand feet high, are beautifully green with coarse grass and moss, and wild flowers of brilliant hues dot the level stretches near the sea. Blue foxes abound, and over the rocks at the water's edge thousands and thousands of seals in ceaseless activity disport themselves noisily day and night from June until December, while millions of water fowl fill the air and the sea and flutter about the cliffs. Three hundred days in the year the weather is dark and dismal, and fogs hide the islands for days at a time. The cold is never excessive, but the winter storms are severe, and terrific gales sweep over sea and land. There is no harbor, and ships come to anchor a mile or so from shore.

STILL ANOTHER EXPLOSIVE.

Marsite Said to Be the Safest and
One of the Most Powerful
Yet Known.

Safety in use, so far as the user is concerned, and hideous devastation to the foe are the ideals in war explosives at which the world's war bureaus are aiming. Marsite, the invention of Mr. Hathaway, of Wellsboro, Pa., is said to be the safest of the high explosives yet known. The ordnance bureau of the United States navy is investigating the material, and the preliminary tests are said to be highly favorable, says the London Times.

Marsite is known to be a nitrate compound, although its composition is the secret of its inventor. In appearance it resembles dark-colored clay, and it is said to be as safe as clay to handle. You may with impunity pound it with a hammer or rasp it with a file. You cannot explode it by concussion, and if you set fire to it it merely sizzles for a moment and then goes out.

But a percussion arrangement—failing that, an electric current—will do all that the most exacting military man could ask. A quantity of marsite in a four-inch shell was put in an excavation in the ground. Over the hole was placed a screen of steel an inch thick, about which a wooden structure was built. When the electric current was turned on a terrific explosion occurred, which tore a hole in the steel screen and burst the shell into thousands of fragments. Placed between cakes of ice to demonstrate that the explosive is not affected by cold, the explosion tore the ice to pieces and cast fragments high in the air.

It is claimed that the shell may be safely fired from a gun with the initial velocity of 2,000 feet a second.

Dates of Easter.

The New York World Almanac contains a table giving the date of Easter Sunday in each year of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. It seems the date falls within the limits between March 22 and April 25. In 1913 it was March 23. In 1843 and again in 1856 it was March 23. In 1886 the date fell on April 23—the limit—and in 1943 it will occur again. In the year 2000 (as it was in 1843) the date falls on April 23—the date of Shakespeare's birth and death.—Hartford Times.

MIXED IN COLORS.

He Forgot His Wife's Orders and Came Near Being Gobbled
by the Copper.

The man with the deep expression of worry on his face had been leaning against the iron railing for over 30 minutes. At intervals he would mutter incoherent words and then tug at his mustache. The policeman on the corner eyed him for some time and then decided he was a suspicious character, says the Chicago Evening News.

"What are you standing here for?" demanded the bluecoat, abruptly.

"I can't remember," murmured the man, mysteriously.

"Can't remember what?"

"It may have been emerald green, but—"

"Sure, and he has been out on the town. He's ramblin' about the last creme de menthe, I guess."

"I think it was violet, but I am not certain."

"Never mind the color, sporty; it put you out of the business all right. Brace up and tell me—"

"Rose or azure blue?"

"He's been monkeying with posa cafes. What club did you wander from, sporty?"

"And yet it may have been royal purple."

"Stop! Any man that puts any such liquor as that under his belt ought to get two years in the 'gold' ward."

"Pronounced heliotrope, or—"

"Heliotrope! Sure, and the drinks must have been made to order. But brace up and tell me—"

"Pale—"

"I'll not hear any more of them. They make my head dizzy. Tell me what club you come out of and if you have the price of a cab I'll send you back to straighten out. Come, now?"

"I've named every color in the rainbow, and yet—"

"You've named a dozen rainbows. But loosen up, or I'll have to call the wagon."

"She told me three times."

"So there is a woman mixed up in the mixed drinks? Well, hurry up, now?"

"If I only had the memory I used to have."

"Sure, and French drinks will paralyze the memory of a detective. But hurry now!"

For the first time the troubled man seemed to hear the policeman's voice.

"Why, officer, I haven't done anything. I only forgot the color and number."

"The number of your house or the club?"

"Why, the number of the embroidery silk my wife wants. She is going to work a cushion."

"And you haven't been talking about French cafe drinks?"

"Certainly not, officer! I was—"

"Move on, or I'll run you in. I thought I was up against a real sport."

SUFFERING OF HORSES.

Those Engaged in Military Operations to Receive International Protection.

A movement to lessen suffering on battlefields has been begun in England which must interest all those who feel for lower animals in the direst misery. It is intended to bring under international protection, such as the Red Cross now affords men who labor for the relief of the wounded soldiers, an adequate corps whose duty would be the killing of horses so badly hurt that they must die, either quickly and humanely or by lingering torture, as is often the case under existing conditions, says the Chicago Leader.

Now there is no protection for soldiers or other persons who may undertake to put wounded horses out of misery after a battle or during a lull in an engagement. They risk their own lives, and their operations are liable to be forbidden entirely by commanders fearing trickery. So great numbers of wounded horses linger many hours in agony and then perish miserably. They might be put out of pain very quickly if a small body of men were free to do the work under such shelter as the Red Cross gives to those who minister to wounded men.

At best war involves fearful sufferings for horses and other animals. In the stress of battle or the crisis of a campaign there is no question of avoiding the suffering or exhaustion of any of the lower animals. They simply have to die under the strain of intolerable crowding forward, under a burning sun and without water. It may be, or taxed beyond their endurance. They go hungry, thirsty and uncaressed for, and in many cases when their need is greatest. So they die miserably by thousands. One of the best newspapers in England asserts that since Lord Roberts began his campaign for the relief of Kimberley and the capture of Bloemfontein he has lost 11,000 horses. The death of those animals means an untold and immense amount of the direst pain and misery.

Whatever can be done to lessen this burden of agony loaded upon the animals that man involves in his quarrels must appeal to the best instincts of humane men and women in all lands.

Poor But Honest.

Clerk—Please, sir, may I have my next month's salary in advance?
Employer—That would be very unbusinesslike. How do I know that you will not die to-night?

But Her Brain Was Unsympathetic and She Didn't Catch On Very Readily.

"Yes, my dear, a man out in Oklahoma says he has talked over a wireless telegraph line a distance of 1,000 miles."

"He must have a loud voice."
 "You don't understand, my dear. He doesn't use his voice," said Mr. Mudlark, according to the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"What does he use? A phonograph?"
 "No, no! He makes signals."
 "Signals that can be seen 1,000 miles? Pooh!"

"Just let me explain, my dear. He starts sound waves, you know. He starts them at intervals, and they know what word it is by the number of sound waves between the intervals. Simple, isn't it?"

"Do you understand it?"
 "Of course I do!"
 "Then it's simple. By the way, what is a sound wave?"

"A sound wave, my dear, is a fluctuation produced in the air by an agitation."

"Any air? 'Home, Sweet Home?'"
 "No, no. Atmospheric air. The stronger the agitation the stronger the sound waves. To converse over an imaginary line 1,000 miles in length would require—ah—very strong talk."

"I suppose he eats lots of onions."
 "Who eats onions?"

"The man who creates the agitation with his strong talk."
 "Nonsense, my dear. You don't seem to comprehend the intricacies of science. Or, rather, you are not up in its technical terms. Besides, there is the electricity. You mustn't forget the electricity."

"Well, I have forgotten it. You didn't say anything about my bringing it. Anyhow, how could I carry it?"
 "My dear, you are quite too literal. I merely wanted you to understand that the sound waves are invigorated, and extended, and vitalized by electricity."

"That sounds like a patent medicine advertisement."
 "My dear, my dear! I fear it is quite useless to make any further endeavor to instill scientific principles into your unsympathetic brain."

"Let my brain alone, William Mudlark. Break off that wretched habit of covering everything you haven't got yourself. Do you seem to catch the sound waves I'm agitating toward you at this blessed moment?"

"Yes, Maria."
 "Without electricity?"
 "Yes, Maria."
 "Well, then, climb down into the cellar and fill up the furnace, and then get yourself to bed instantly!"
 "Yes, Maria."

HOUSECLEANING HINTS.

The Time to Dust Walls and Begin War Upon Moths and Other Pests.

The dusting down of the wall is one of the most important parts of housecleaning. This should be done early, even if it has to be repeated later, says the New York Tribune, when carpets are lifted. The house moth conceals itself in the dust that collects in the ridges of the cornice and elsewhere on the ceiling. These moths should be swept down early, while they are in an inactive state and before they begin laying eggs. These eggs are concealed in wool, fur and wherever the moth can find a place which will furnish food for the destructive little grubs that hatch out. All insect life wakes up in April, and often in March, and this is the best time to fight the clothes moth, as well as all other insect pests.

It is useless to dust down ceilings unless the work is thoroughly done. In order to do this the worker must be provided with a long handled broom, made with a very light handle. An excellent broom with an extension handle was formerly made in Boston under a patent granted to a woman. It was simple and inexpensive, and perfectly adapted to its work of sweeping ceilings and sidewalls. Similar brooms are now sold by all the furniture-furnishing stores, but it is still difficult to find a broom for sweeping ceilings with so light a handle as those made by this Boston woman. The Japanese make ideal brooms for sweeping dust from wood and matting. They have light bamboo handles. Illustrations of this broom have appeared in various papers, and, though it is a perfect broom for all purposes for which it is used in Japan, the handle is not long enough to reach our high ceilings, though long enough to reach the low ceilings of Japanese houses. Nor is the broom stiff enough for sweeping carpets, because there are no carpets in Japan, only light rugs, which may be easily shaken. The average American broom manufacturer makes a broom with so heavy a handle that it adds considerably to the labor of sweeping. The ceiling broom should have a handle long enough so that a woman can easily reach any house ceiling when she is standing on the floor, and thus dust it thoroughly.

The Fashionable Figure.

The reign of the woman who is at all stout is entirely past. Just now, to be really correct, we must be very straight and thin and tall. Indeed our bodies are being sent home to us so increased in whalebone that it feels like getting into chain armor to put on a new frock. But, as we have to be straight and slim to be correct, we have, of course, to take steps to become so at whatever cost of personal discomfort.—Washington Star.

A Little Hint.

Treat your stomach well and you will be rewarded with a fine, clear skin and bright eyes.—Detroit Free Press

THEY SHOULD WORK.

Convicts Should Be Engaged in Productive Labor.

State Laws Ought to Be Uniform. Recommendations of Industrial Commission in Its Report to Congress.

The industrial commission has sent to congress its report on prison labor. In summing up its conclusions the commission says that all prisoners should be engaged in productive labor, and that the state should have absolute control of their care. Their employment, with the intention of producing revenues, the report says, tends to the greatest competition with free labor and detracts from the punitive reformatory and disciplinary features of the prisons. Employment of prisoners on public works has the least tendency to competition with free labor. In order to harmonize the antagonistic interests of the different states, the industrial operation of penal and like institutions in each should be under the supervision of a central office. Adoption of laws embracing the principles mentioned has been retarded by various conditions in many of the states. The adoption of uniform legislation, the report says, is the only remedy for existing abuses. The commission submits general provisions of law mainly from the New York statute, and recommends that such partial shall be embodied in the laws of the different states as is found possible. The interdiction of interstate commerce in all goods, etc., the product of convict labor, supplemented by state legislation, would be the nearest to a complete remedy for evils of convict labor competition, but in the absence of such laws the most practical step would be an act making such goods upon their arrival in any state subject to its laws. Commissioners Smythe and Harris dissent from that portion of the report recommending an interdiction of prison-made goods, and Mr. Smythe also dissents from a recommendation fixing eight hours for a day's work for prisoners.

PREHISTORIC MAN.

The Evidence of His Existence in Various Western States to Be Preserved.

The house committee on public lands has made a favorable report upon a bill for the regulation of monuments, ruins, and other objects on public lands. The measure directs the secretary of the interior to set aside and reserve from public sale, entry and settlement any public lands in Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico upon which are monuments, cliff dwellings, cemeteries, graves, mounds, forts, or any other work of prehistoric and aboriginal man.

The report says there are indications that a highly civilized race occupied this part of the country hundreds of years before America was discovered, and built dwellings, and the pottery and utensils used indicate these people were a race much superior to the Indians.

These ruins are of the greatest interest to students of archaeological science. The ruins are located a considerable distance from the railroads, and up to this time have not been destroyed, and are visited each year by a great many people. Consequently their destruction is taking place.

The various archaeological societies are much interested in the preservation of these ruins, and the only practicable way they can be preserved is by creating a reservation of land surrounding each ruin and providing a penalty for any destruction.

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

Druggists sell Mother's Friend for $1 a bottle. The Bradford Regulator Co., Atlanta, Ga. Send for our free illustrated book.

Does It Pay To Buy Cheap.

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the ONLY remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Beech's German Syrup." It not only soothes and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try ONE bottle. Blood Troubles:

Cancer, Scrofula, Old Sores,

Rheumatism, Contagious Blood Poison, Chronic Ulcers.

As the blood contains all the elements necessary to sustain life, it is important that it be kept free of all impurities, or it becomes a source of disease, poisoning instead of nourishing the body, and loss of health is sure to follow. Some poisons enter the blood from without, through the skin by absorption, or inoculation; others from within, as when waste products accumulate in the system and ferment, allowing disease germs to develop and be taken into the circulation. While all blood troubles have one common origin, each has some peculiarity to distinguish it from the other. Contagious Blood Poison, Scrofula, Cancer, Rheumatism, Eczema and other blood diseases can be distinguished by a certain sore, ulcer, eruption or inflammation appearing on the skin. Every blood disease shows sooner or later on the outside and on the weakest part of the body, or where it finds the least resistance. Many mistake the sore or outward sign for the real disease, and attempt a cure by the use of salves, liniments and other external applications. Valuable time is lost and no permanent benefit derived from such treatment.

BLOOD TROUBLES REQUIRE BLOOD REMEDIES; the poison must be completely and permanently eradicated—the blood reinforced, purified and cleansed, or the disease goes deeper and saps the very life. Mercury, potash and arsenic, the treatment usually prescribed in this class of diseases, are violent poisons, even when taken in small doses—never cure, but do much harm by adding another poison to the already overburdened, diseased blood.

Question Answered

Yes August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers, and grandmothers, never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries. oct-27-17

J. C. Kennedy, Roanoke, Tenn., says, "I cannot say too much for DeWitt's Which Hazel Salve. One box of it cured what the doctors called an incurable ulcer on my jaw." Cures piles and all skin diseases. Look out for worthless imitations. W. T. Brooks.

"I had stomach trouble twenty years and gave up hope of being cured till I began to use Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It has done me so much good I called it the savior of my life," writes W. R. Wilkison, Albany, Tenn. It digests what you eat. W. T. Brooks.

The easiest and most effective method of purifying the blood and invigorating the system is to take DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills for cleansing the liver and bowels. W. T. Brooks.
